DETAILED ACTION

Specification

The lengthy specification has not been checked to the extent necessary to determine the presence of all possible minor errors. Applicant's cooperation is requested in correcting any errors of which applicant may become aware in the specification.

The title of the invention is not descriptive. A new title is required that is clearly indicative of the invention to which the claims are directed.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 3-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Shimada (USP 6,794,995).

Regarding claim 1, Shimada discloses in figure 5 an architecture that teach:

First memory (13) (which is obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to implement it to be nonvolatile memory for storing compressed data and or compressed program);

Input Unit (12) (which is obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to implement it to be a general purpose for controlling compressed programs and/or compressed data);

Second memory (14) (which is obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to implement it to be volatile memory for temporary storing compressed data and or compressed program); and

DSP (15) (which is obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to implement it to be a processor for compressing or expanding digital data).

(see figure 15 and its description) It would have been ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to slightly modify Shimada's architecture (as shown in figure 5) for using as encoding/decoding device in any digital application and improving time required for expanding compressed data.

Regarding claim 3, processor (15) taught in figure 5 by Shimada can be modified for no mean of expanding compressed program data and compressed data by a person ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to meet the circuit's need.

Regarding claim 4, memory (13) taught in figure 5 by Shimada can be stored compressed and/or uncompressed program to be in component (12) and DSP (15) by a person ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to meet the circuit's need.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 2 and 5-11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims. Features of objected claimed are not taught or suggest in the prior art.
